THE COURT: Of use? So, are you going to be able to show that there was some point in time where that exact set of LiDAR signals was used to sort of jump-start their program? Even if they're not using it now, they used it at one point in their development? MS. BAILY: Well, I would say, Your Honor, having that information that resulted from seven years of iterations and driving miles, it's in some ways the crown jewels of the kind of technology that we are talking about. So I would say that having access to that and having -- and evidence of use with respect to that, that's a big damages number. All right. So, but I -- maybe we'll hear more THE COURT: about this, in this closed session. But I think I know the trade secret you are talking about. And are you going to be able to show that that document is in the files of Uber? I don't think so. MS. BAILY: We have evidence of the use of the information. THE COURT: I'm going to just leave it there. Do you know which one she's talking about? MS. DUNN: I do know. I --Well, all right. Well, that one, if it was in THE COURT: fact used and consulted, that would be some valuable information. I think that's correct. I don't know what the dollar amounts would come to.
